- 3. Public-sector Paycheck Protection This prohibits state and local government employers from withholding union dues or fees from workers' wages. Additionally, unions will be prohibited from spending workers' money on political activities without workers' consent.
- 4. Public-sector Project Labor Agreements This is the Michigan model approved by the US Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit. State and local government entities will be prohibited from engaging in contracts that minimize competition for construction projects by requiring that only union or non-union labor can be considered. A level playing field will be required.
- 5. Public-sector Union Recertification Requires annual reconsideration and recertification of workers' bargaining units. This will open up competition for new bargaining units, will give workers a chance to have their voices heard, and will make union leadership accountable to their membership.

These proposals simply ask the General Assembly to put them on the ballot for the people to vote on them individually. Twenty-eight states and four out of five of Ohio's neighboring states have enacted Right-to-Work laws. Clearly, the nation's future is for all workers to have the right to work free of the burden of mandated union payments as a condition of employment. Ohio is being left behind, and it is time for the people to decide Ohio's future.

If you would like to co-sponsor this legislation or have any questions, please contact Joe Michalowski at (614) 466-8134 or joe.michalowski@ohiohouse.gov. Please indicate which constitutional amendment(s) you wish to co-sponsor. The deadline to co-sponsor is Wednesday, December 20, 2017, at 4:00 P.M.

Co-Sponsor Request: Six Right-to-Work Constitutional Amendments

The following are six separate Right-to-Work related constitutional amendments in no particular sequence. Please join me in co-sponsoring one or more of the below:

- 1. Private-sector Right-to-Work No worker should be required to subsidize a union as a condition of employment. Additionally, this will tell the world that Ohio is "open for business."
- 2. Public-sector Right-to-Work This is about freedom of association. Like for the private sector, no worker should be required to subsidize a union as a condition of employment.
- 3. Public-sector Prevailing Wage Repeals the requirement for taxpayers to pay artificially inflated wages, rather than those that are market-based.
- 4. Public-sector Paycheck Protection This prohibits state and local government employers from withholding union dues or fees from workers' wages. Additionally, unions will be prohibited from spending workers' money on political activities without workers' consent.
- 5. Public-sector Project Labor Agreements This is the Michigan model approved by the US Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit. State and local government entities will be prohibited from engaging in contracts that minimize competition for construction projects by requiring that only union or non-union labor can be considered. A level playing field will be required.

Dear Representative Seitz:

As a former state legislator myself, I write today to ask you to consider becoming a Founding Signer of the Pledge to Achieve America's Goals, one of the select group of legislators who signs on during our launch year.

I came together this year with economist Jeffrey Sachs and entrepreneur Adam Pritzker to launch Future Now, a state-focused effort to replace today? 9s cynical and divisive politics with a new focus on achieving our common goals.

When I was in office I was hesitant to sign pledges -- but this one is different. It's a pledge to work toward a set of shared American values called America's Goals, a set of ambitious, measurable targets that reflect shared American values in seven areas:

GOOD JOBS
AFFORDABLE QUALITY HEALTHCARE
INVESTING IN CHILDREN
EMPOWERING PEOPLE OVER
SPECIAL INTERESTS
EQUAL OPPORTUNITY FOR ALL
SUSTAINABLE INFRASTRUCTURE,
RESILIENCE, AND INNOVATION
CLEAN AIR, WATER, AND ENERGY

And, we're here to help you achieve them. Last week we hosted the first-ever Future Now Solutions Summit -- bringing Virginia Delegates committed to America's Goals together with leading national policy groups to turn America's Goals into reality.

We look forward to working with our Founding Signers across the country to bridge the political divide and implement the most effective strategies to achieve America's Goals in their states. Please join us by signing the Pledge to Achieve America's Goals today:

Sign by Dec. 31 to Become a Founding Signer

Thank you and please let us know if you would like any further information on Future Now or the Pledge to Achieve America's Goals. I look forward to working with you.

Message: Bill Seitz,

I am asking you NOT to sign on as a co-sponsor for any of State Rep. John Beckerâ s anti-worker constitutional amendments that are circulating the Ohio House of Representatives.

Iâ m asking you to stand for workers in your district and our state and against these out-of-state parties. You were elected by Ohio voters, not out-of-state special interests. Ohio elected officials should represent the people of Ohio.

This dangerous and divisive matter was settled in 2011, when the people of Ohio voted down SB5. We stand together in Ohio for fair wages and safety regulations, and I do not want to see taxpayer dollars wasted on an attempt to undermine those rights.

Dear Mr. Breen,

Thank you for your email. As you may recall, I was one of the few Republicans to oppose Senate Bill 5, so I understand your concerns about overreach. I am not currently cosponsoring any of the six recently introduced proposals for constitutional amendments, and I would be surprised if they make it to the 2018 ballot.

That said, what is different about these proposals from Senate Bill 5 is that they are proposing a statewide vote of the citizens, not a legislatively enacted solution. If neither employers, workers, nor union members are supporting passage of these measures, then what better way to find out than to have statewide a vote? As you no doubt know, Kentucky, Indiana, Michigan, and West Virginia have all become "right to work" states in recent years--by legislative action. To Representative Becker's credit, he is not proposing that; instead, he is seeking a statewide vote on the six proposals he has drafted.

In any event, I appreciate you sharing your perspectives with me. Time will tell if any of these proposals will make it to the ballot in 2018, and while I am no prophet of the future, my guess is they will not.

Sincerely.

William J. Seitz

Please don't support any of Rep. Beckers Anti-Union Bills

Message: Bill Seitz,

I am deeply disturbed by the recent co-sponsorship request from Representative Beckersâ office that puts forward six different anti-worker Constitutional Amendments. I am asking you as your constituent and a voter to not sign on as a co-sponsor or to support any of these proposals and to actively work to ensure that none of them advance to the Senate.

These six proposals would effectively undo labor law that has helped serve as a catalyst to create Ohioâ s middle class.

These proposals are nothing but a an attempt bu out-of-state groups like ALEC to silence workers at the workplace and slash wages and benefits at a time when they have been stagnant for far too long.

Neither employers nor workers and union members like myself are asking for these union-busting bills to be enacted.

Working people overwhelmingly rejected these types of attacks in 2011 when they used the citizensa veto and repealed Senate Bill 5. Ohioans strongly believe that it is past time to put the ugliness and spitefulness behind us and work to find common ground with all political parties, business and labor, on different ways to grow our economy from the middle out and raise wages for all.

Thank you for your consideration on this vital matter.

PRESS STATEMENT

Honor Martin Luther King by continuing the fight

Contact: Amy Hanauer 216.361.9801

In honor of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Day, Policy Matters Ohio Executive Director Amy Hanauer releases the following statement:

"Nearly 50 years ago, Martin Luther King was murdered in Memphis, Tenn. by a racist white man. King travelled there to support the city's black sanitation workers in their strike protesting dangerous work conditions and unfair wages. It was part of King's Poor People's Campaign, which expanded the struggle for racial justice from desegregation and voting rights to economic security.

"There is nothing new about poverty," he wrote in his final book, "Where Do We Go from Here: Chaos or Community? "What is new, however, is that we now have the resources to get rid of it... Why should there be hunger and privation in any land, in any city, at any table, when man has the resources and the scientific know-how to provide all mankind with the basic necessities of life? There is no deficit in human resources, the deficit is in human will."

King knew the American dream would remain out of reach for black people until they could access decent housing, fair wages, safe working conditions, good schools and quality health care. He knew in many ways, the dream eluded white Americans living in poverty as well.

At Policy Matters Ohio, we try to honor King's legacy by insisting on policies that recognize the dignity of all people. This year, we face several big fights. Having just drastically cut taxes to benefit the wealthiest few, President Trump and Republicans in Congress now aim to slash funding for programs that broaden opportunity like Medicaid, food aid, college assistance, public education and more. Children of undocumented immigrants who know no other home, could face deportation after Trump scrapped a program that allowed them to come out of the shadows and contribute to society without fear.

In Ohio, GOP lawmakers are pushing so-called "right to work" laws that would weaken labor unions — the single most effective tool in protecting workers' rights, ensuring decent wages and shrinking workplace barriers for people of color and women. With the Trump administration's blessing, state policymakers are pursuing work requirements, premiums and co-pays that would make it harder for low-income Ohioans to access health care through Medicaid.

These are challenging times, but something powerful has broken free across Ohio and the United States. We see it in the thousands who marched in D.C. and locally last year; the endless calls to members of Congress in defense of the Affordable Care Act and the outcry of support for our immigrant neighbors. The human will for change is building. Join us as we strive to answer King's call and 'bend the arc of the moral universe towards justice."

As we pause to celebrate Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., I= 2m struck again by his words and his wisdom. Whatever you are striving for in your community, the following excerpt from one of his addresses should serve you well.

-Kenny McDonald

Facing the Challenge of a New Age

by Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

"Those of us who live in the Twentieth Century are privileged to live in one of the most momentous periods of human history. It is an exciting age filled with hope. It is an age in which a new social order is being born. We stand today between two worlds? 4the dying old and the emerging new.

Now I am aware of the fact that there are those who would contend that we live in the most ghastly period of human history. They would argue that the rhythmic beat of the deep rumblings of discontent from Asia, the uprisings in Africa, the nationalistic longings of Egypt, the roaring cannons from Hungary, and the racial tensions of America are all indicative of the deep and tragic midnight which encompasses our civilization. They would argue that we are retrogressing instead of progressing. But far from representing retrogression and tragic meaninglessness, the present tensions represent the necessary pains that accompany the birth of anything new. Long ago the Greek philosopher Heraclitus argued that justice emerges from the strife of opposites, and Hegel, in modern philosophy, preached a doctrine of growth through struggle. It is both historically and biologically true that there can be no birth and growth without birth and growing pains. Whenever there is the emergence of the new we confront the recalcitrance of the old. So the tensions which we witness in the world today are indicative of the fact that a new world order is being born and an old order is passing away."

-Excerpt from the "Facing the Challenge of a New Age" address delivered by Dr. King on December 3, 1956 at the First Annual Institute on Nonviolence and Social Change

NJ? 9s Evolving Health Care Arena: Trends To Watch In 2018

New Jersey is one of the most competitive and heavily regulated states in terms of health care, making it a good barometer for how the industry is evolving nationally. As physicians and medical groups deal with issues like flat reimbursement from insurance providers and the rapidly rising costs of operating a medical practice, the ways in which doctors deliver health care will continue to change in 2018, says John Fanburg of Brach Eichler LLC. How Tax Reform Will Change FCA Settlements

Little attention has been paid to a provision of the new tax law that requires federal agencies to specify, at the time of settlement of government claims, the portion of the settlement that may be deductible as a business expense. This is sure to impact False Claims Act and other settlements involving the government going forward, say attorneys with Fried Frank Harris Shriver & Jacobson LLP. Read more »

5 Advertising Law Trends To Watch In 2018

Legal and technological disruptions in the advertising space last year outpaced the development of prior years. Although many topics contributed to this industry upheaval, there are five trends that shaped 2017 and will continue to develop in the coming years, say Jason Gordon and Andrew Levad of Reed Smith LLP. Learn what the Founders intended our federal government to really be versus what it has become and learn what we need to do to fix it!

CONSTITUTION BOOT CAMP IS NOW AVAILABLE ON DVD

After several months of hard work preparing and refining a video version of our training, we proudly announce the release of Constitution Boot Camp on video. Constitutional Boot Camp on video is a fast-paced, entertaining and provocative way to learn about our history and the founding of the most successful form of government ever devised. It's perfect for persons of any age from teens to seniors and is a complete introductory course on the Constitution, its meaning as the Founders intended and how it came to be.

The Constitution and the federal government that it created was clearly a work of divine inspiration, but sadly, corrupt politicians have distorted and demeaned the founders' intent almost from the beginning. We now have a systemically corrupt federal government that the Founders would not recognize as the off-spring of their work and would whole-heartedly disavow. After decades of abuse, government over-reach and usurpation of power by politicians and federal bureaucrats, We The People of this generation are called to restore government operation back to its Constitutional limits.

Constitution Boot Camp on video consists of FOUR DVD's that provide the complete course in four 1- hour segments playable on any DVD video device.

Here is the synopsis of the subjects covered on each DVD:

DVD #1:

- Introduction
- Misconceptions
- . God Given vs. Constitutional Rights
- Declaration of Independence

DVD #2:

- Oath of Office
- · Rule of Law
- Enumerated Powers of Congress

DVD #3:

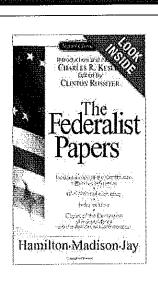

- Enumerated Powers of the President
- Enumerated Powers of the Federal Courts
- · God, Church and State

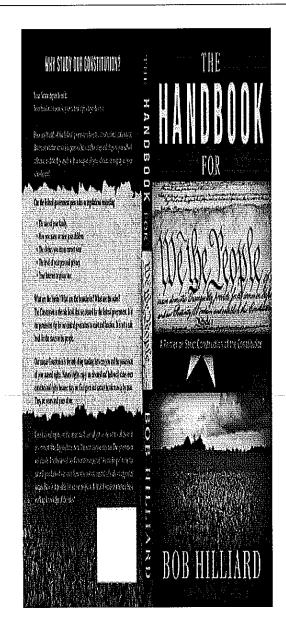

DVD #4:

- Amendments
- Remedies, Including Nullification

Constitution Boot Camp on video is intended to give you the grounding you need to begin a journey of understanding what the Constitution declares and what it means for you, your family, your future and your community. It will give you the tools you need to join the battle to restore the federal government to its rightful position as a government of the People, by the People and for the People.

Along with the DVD's you can obtain the two books that we recommend and use as textbooks at each of our Boot Camp classes, The Federalist Papers and the Handbook For We The People.

For a limited time, we are extending a super low price for the Constitution Boot Camp on video sets along with our already below-retail prices for the books. If you act now, you can own this 4-DVD set for a donation of just $20 plus $3 S&H. Order yours NOW! Click HERE

Helping people make informed decisions about marijuana

January 24 • 2018

Once Pot Friendly

N. California County Bans Marijuana

Last week, Calaveras County's new Board of Supervisors banned all marijuana cultivation within its boundaries. This rural county the size of Rhode Island has a population of 44,000. Financially challenged, it needed the money the previous Board thought legalizing cultivation would bring.

That Board legalized marijuana cultivation for medical use in 2016 after a devastating fire destroyed more than 500 homes the year before. Owners sold their burned-out property to cash-laden pot growers desperate for farmland in anticipation that Proposition 64 would pass and vastly increase demand for a legal product.

Motivated by being able to tax legal growers, officials expected to receive some 250 growing applications. They got three times that. By last week, about 200 had been approved. About the same number were rejected, and the rest were being processed. Another 1,000 illegal grow sites had flooded the county as well. Last year, authorities cut down some 30,000 plants from just 40 such sites.

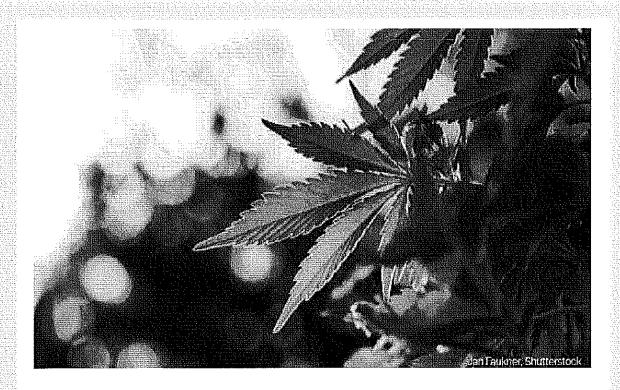

Last October, Supervisor Dennis Mills released a hair-raising report, Cultivating Disaster, on the unparalleled damage so many growers have done to the county's environment. The report is an assessment by local, state, and federal agencies, academic institutions, and journalists' accounts of the environmental devastation cultivation has brought to the county. Below is a picture from the report showing abandoned containers of fertilizers and other chemicals used at just one site.

Suddenly the $10 million in taxes and fees the county took in from licensed growers last year paled in comparison to the estimated $1.2 billion cost to clean up the environmental mess in Calaveras County.

The backlash was so intense that this month citizens removed four of the five members of the Board of Supervisors who legalized cultivation and replaced them with candidates who had vowed to ban it if elected.

Cigarettes and Pot Linked to Teen Psychosis

A new study published in JAMA Psychiatry finds that teenagers who use cigarettes and marijuana have elevated risks for experiencing psychotic episodes.

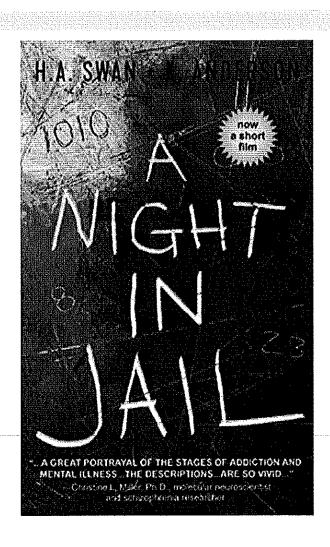

Researchers studied 3,328 teens living in the Bristol area of the UK. The teens answered questions about their cigarette and marijuana use at six different times between the ages of 14 and 19.

Compared to nonusers, the researchers found that teens who smoked only cigarettes at an early age had a 4.3 percent higher probability of having a psychotic experience by age 18. Teens who used only cannabis at an early age had a lower probability (3.2 percent) for psychosis but a much higher one (11.9 percent) if they started using the drug later.

Next, researchers looked at other factors in the adolescents' lives such as bullying, alcohol use, social class, family history of schizophrenia, and others. These factors greatly weakened the association between cigarette use and the risk for psychotic episodes, but did not influence the relationship between marijuana and psychosis.

From Gummy Bears to Open Doors, Inspections Identify Problems at Massachusetts Medical Marijuana Dispensaries

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health (DPH) has conducted 327 inspections of the state's medical marijuana dispensaries since the first one opened in 2015.

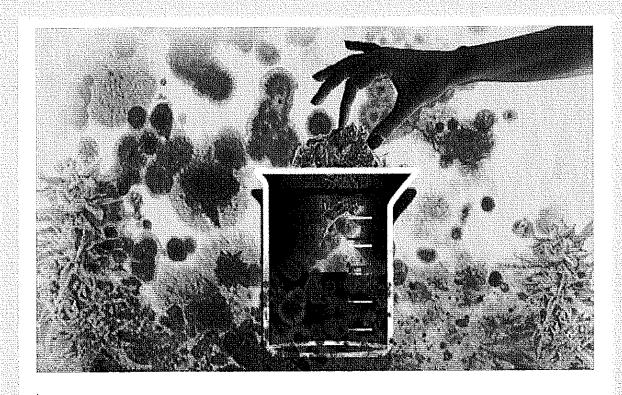

= AMassLive.com obtained copies of all the deficiency reports and plans for corrections those inspections generated.

This article details some of the reports and presents all those received in table format. The state has 19 medical marijuana dispensaries which DPH says have been responsive to their findings. "As always, DPH's priority continues to be that patients have safe and reliable access to medical marijuana across the Commonwealth."

Contaminated Flower May Be Getting Patients and Employees Sick

A former employee at New England Treatment Access (NETA), a registered medical marijuana dispensary in Massachusetts, quit her job there and filed a complaint with the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) claiming she was regularly exposed to mold in marijuana flowers sold there.

She also alleges that the dispensary soaks plant material in hydrogen peroxide to remove the mold the dispensary denies is present in its product. OSHA responded to her claim with a telephone interview, she says. When NETA denied their plants contained mold and presented outside testing evidence they were mold-free, the case was dropped.

No other NETA employees were interviewed, but many say they dealt with mold in plants they trim. One says his supervisor told him to soak moldy plants in hydrogen peroxide on NETA pot to remove the mold. Some employees say they have gone home from work with rashes. There is no ventilation in the workrooms and no one is advised to wear a mask to protect them from breathing in mold.

Last June, the former employee wrote a letter to DPH:

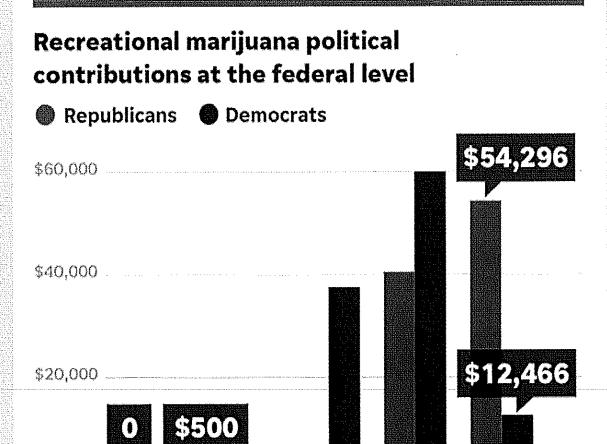

Two months after beginning to consume NETA products, I began to experience the following symptoms: headaches, sore throat and multiple respiratory illnesses.

Once the marijuana concentrates (shatter, wax) were released in 2016, I began consuming them. My symptoms progressed to bloating in my abdomen, nausea, cramps in my GI tract and difficulty sleeping.

Neurological symptoms such as neuropathy (numbness in the toes and ball of my foot) and tetany (spasms) in my calves greatly increased in escalating pain intensity and frequency starting November 2016, and I also began to experience fasciculations (twitching) in my calves when seated in the beginning of 2017.

The article does not say whether she has received a reply.

Marijuana Money
Increasingly Flowing to Republican Lawmakers

USA Today reports that marijuana business owners are increasingly contributing to federal lawmakers and political action committees to protect their interests. And their money is increasingly finding its way to Republican lawmakers.

Marijuana lobbying groups like the Marijuana Policy Project and others have long contributed to state lawmakers to legalize the drug, but now the industry they created is chipping in too.

Contributors are required to disclose who they work for, but black-market contributors claim they are self-employed or a consultant to hide the source of the money.

Republican Congressman from California Dana Rohrabacher is a favorite candidate for industry donations. He is the author of an annual budget amendment that forbids the Department of Justice from helping states enforce federal marijuana laws.

Read USA Today story here.

[Executive editor's note: The People of Calaveras County, California, might want to persuade Cong. Rohrabacher's constituents to give him the same treatment they gave their former Board of Supervisors last week.]

Our mission is to protect children from addictive drugs by shining light on the science that underlies their effects.

Addictive drugs harm children, families, and communities.

Legalizing them creates commercial industries that make drugs more available, increase use, and expand harms.

Science shows that addiction begins in childhood. It is a pediatric disease that is preventable.

We work to prevent the emergence of commercial addictive drug industries that will target children.

We support FDA approved medicines.

We support the assessment, treatment, and/or social and educational services for users and low-level dealers as alternatives to incarceration.

About SAM (Smart Approaches to Marijuana)

SAM is a nonpartisan alliance of lawmakers, scientists and other concerned citizens who want to move beyond simplistic discussions of "incarceration versus legalization" when discussing marijuana use and instead focus on practical changes in marijuana policy that neither demonizes users nor legalizes the drug. SAM supports a treatment, health-first marijuana policy. SAM has four main goals:

- To inform public policy with the science of today's marijuana.
- To reduce the unintended consequences of current marijuana policies, such as lifelong stigma due to arrest.
- To prevent the establishment of "Big Marijuana" and a 21st-Century tobacco industry that would market marijuana to children.
- To promote research of marijuana's medical properties and produce, non-smoked, non-psychoactive pharmacy-attainable medications.

Advocates call for policies that support Ohio's workers

Contact: Hannah Halbert

614.221.4505

Later this month, the U.S. Supreme Court will hear Janus v. AFSCME, which threatens the ability of unions to collect fair share fees. Ohio legislators also recently unveiled a slate of proposals designed to give more power to corporations at the expense of workers, including so-called "right to work" legislation, which could greatly reduce the power of Ohio's unions. With working people facing threats at state and national levels, Policy Matters Ohio joined ProgressOhio to unveil a new policy brief, "A way forward: 10 ways to support Ohio's working people."

"So-called 'Right-to-Work' legislation and related judicial attacks like the pending Janus case don't address these real struggles of working people," Policy Matters Researcher Hannah Halbert said. "Unionized workers in Ohio make $4 an hour more than their non-union counterparts, $8,000 more a year for full-time work. Union workers are more likely to have pensions and paid sick days, and less likely to be treated unfairly at work or experience harassment or workplace injuries."

Cincinnati fire fighter and Ohio Association of Professional Fire Fighters Communications Director Doug Stern said so-called right-to-work laws not only chip away at the fabric of unions, but can make communities less safe.

"Attacks like these on working people and unions are attacks on fire fighters, police officers and all first responders, he said. "Our fire fighters and police officers deserve the right to collectively bargain so that we can effectively advocate for the training and equipment that keep our communities safe."

For decades, state and federal policymakers have chipped away at worker protections. As a result, Ohio's job growth has been weak and the state's wealthiest 1 percent earned more than 19 times the average of the bottom 99 percent of earners combined.

"The decline of unions has significantly contributed to the decline of the middle class as wages have remained stagnant and workers are getting a smaller and smaller share of income," said Wright State University Economics Professor Rudy Fichtenbaum. "Attacks on unions are not about increasing job growth; they're about corporations and the political elite gaining power over workers."

Policy Matters calls for the policymakers to protect workers' right to organize, as well as strengthen the public sector, raise the minimum wage, restore the 40-hour work week, fix Ohio's broken unemployment compensation system and more.

See the press conference on Facebook Live.

Port Authority Authorizes Name Change, Expansion For New York's Stewart International Airport.

USA Today (2/19, Wilson) reports that Stewart International Airport in New York may soon undergo a name change and $30 million expansion. The Port Authority of New York and New Jersey authorized the changes on Thursday. The proposed project will "expand the terminal by 19,850 square feet, adding a customs inspection area to accommodate domestic and international passengers simultaneously at the Hudson Valley airport."= ACurrently, the airport lacks a "dedicated area to process international travelers." The airport would be renamed New York International at Stewart Field, with completion of the project anticipated for 2020. Global Gateway Alliance Chairman Joseph Sitt praised the proposal for its potential to alleviate congestion at New York's airports, which he said will not "change without new capacity," which he said will come through "proposals like the Stewart International Airport expansion along with better transportation, a real and sustained commitment to marketing, and, most of all, more flights and services to attract passengers."

Justice Department Charges Three Men With Providing UAV Parts To Hezbollah.

Reuters (2/16) reported that the Justice Department announced Friday that authorities "have charged three men with illegally exporting drone parts and other material from the United States to Lebanon's militant Hezbollah group." Two of the suspects, Usama Darwich Hamade and Issam Darwich Hamade, "were in custody in South Africa," while the third. Samir Ahmed Berro, "remained at large."

ALPA, NATCA, A4A Urge Congress To Tighten UAV Regulations.

Air Transport World (2/17, Carey) reported that the Air Line Pilots Association, the National Air Traffic Controllers Association, and the trade group Airlines for America have all "asked Congress to amend Section 336 of the FAA Modernization and Reform Act of 2012." In a letter from February 13 signed by leaders from all three groups, the stakeholders say Section 336, which blocks FAA from passing regulations on model aircraft flown recreationally, "has limited the FAA= 2s ability to fully regulate model and hobby UAS to the point that safety of the national airspace is at risk." The letter cited a video "that shows a Frontier Airlines Airbus A320 passing underneath an apparent drone while on approach to Las Vegas McCarran International Airport" in clear violation of FAA guidelines for UAV operators.

AVIATION

Helicopter Crash May Be First Aircraft Collision Linked To UAV.

Bloomberg News (2/16, Levin) reported that the crash landing of a helicopter in South Carolina last week "may have been triggered by a civilian drone, which would make it the first drone-related crash of an aircraft in the US." The incident occurred last Wednesday and involved a student pilot and instructor, "both of whom told investigators that a small drone appeared directly in front of them, according to a Charleston Police Department report." The instructor took over the controls and attempted to avoid a collision, during which the tail of the helicopter "hit a tree or brush, triggering a crash landing." The FAA has not confirmed the "possible role of the drone," but the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) is "aware of initial reports that a drone may have been involved in the crash and is gathering information on the case, spokesman Chris O'Neil said in an email Thursday." = A

Israel Successfully Tests Arrow-3 Missile Defense System.

The AP (2/19) reports that Israel has announced it has successfully tested an advanced missile defense system with the capability of defending the country against ballistic missile threats. The Israeli Defense Ministry called Monday's test of the Arrow-3 interceptor a "major milestone" in Israel's development of missile defense systems to guard "against current and future threats in the region." Two previous tests of the system were recently delayed. Arrow-3, developed by The Boeing Company and Israel Aerospace Industries (IAI), is part of a "multi-layered system" Israel is developing to "defend against both short- and mid-range rockets fired from the Gaza Strip and Lebanon, as well as Iran's long-range missiles." Other components in the system include the Iron Dome, David's Sling, and Arrow-2 systems.

FAA Awards Boeing 787-10 Production Certificate.

FlightGlobal (2/16) reported that the FAA had awarded The Boeing Company a "production certificate for the 787-10 on 15 February, the manufacturer says." The approval means that Boeing is officially authorized to produce the new 330-seat airliner. Boeing plans to deliver the initial 787-10 to Singapore Airlines this March.

Gulfstream To Build Service Center At Appleton Airport.

The AP (2/16) reported that Gulfstream Aerospace will expand its operations at Appleton International Airport, building a new $40 million service center that is expected to add 200 jobs. WLUK-TV reported that "groundbreaking is scheduled for later this year, with the building opening in mid-2019."

Reuters (2/16) reported that the new facility is expected to begin operations in the second quarter of 2019.

FAA Approves Boeing 737 MAX-9 For Commercial Service.

Reuters (2/16, Banerjee) reported that The Boeing Company $\overline{>}$ 0said on Friday the US Federal Aviation Administration had officially certified its 737 MAX-9 aircraft for commercial service." The approval "affirms the airplane's handling, systems and overall performance all comply with required aviation regulations, Boeing said." Boeing is preparing the aircraft for its initial delivery to Lion Air Group.

GA-ASI Submits Stingray UAV For US Navy MQ-25 Contest.

The Aviation International News (2/16, Pocock) reported that General Atomics Aeronautical Systems Inc. (GA-ASI) revealed in a "surprise announcement" that it had submitted a "new design named Stingray for the US Navy's MQ-25 unmanned tanker requirement." The company had previously indicated it would submit the Sea Avenger variant of its Predator C UAV for the bid. GA-ASI also released an "extensive list of partners in its bid, including Boeing, even though that company has made its own alternative bid for this requirement." Boeing's Autonomous Systems Division, which includes Insitu, is "playing an unspecified role in the GA-ASI bid." In a statement, the company claimed that its offering "exceeds all of the Navy's requirements, including carrier suitability...at the lowest technical and schedule risk."

Airbus To Reduce A380 Production To "Digestible" Six Aircraft Per Year.

FlightGlobal (2/16, Gubisch) reported that Airbus plans to reduce production of its A380 jumbo jet to six aircraft a year by 2020 in a "bid to sustain its flagship programme while keeping losses from the aircraft's production" at a 歹 0digestible" level. Airbus plans to delivery 12 A380s this year, and will reduce production to eight aircraft in 2019. Airbus CEO Tom Enders said that the rate of six aircraft represents the "minimum歹 0 volume at which production could be maintained with a "reasonable level of efficiency." Enders added, "It doesn't mean we are still making money on that, but the losses that such a low rate would produce are certainly digestible." However, Enders said that this level of production represents "rock bottom," and is "clearly not where we want to leave it," and said that he anticipates additional A380 orders from existing or new operators.

Airbus: Initial Details Of Franco-German Fighter To Emerge Later In 2018.

Reuters (2/16, Siebold) reported that the initial details of a "planned Franco-German program to develop a next-generation fighter jet should emerge in the second half of 2018, the head of Airbus's defense unit told Reuters on Friday." Dirk Hoke "said France and Germany would work out in coming months how to proceed with the program, including whether to bring in an additional partner country, such as Britain."

Air France Reports Strong Earnings In Fourth Quarter.

The Financial Times (2/16, White, Subscription Publication) reported that Air France-KLM reported strong passenger numbers and load factor in its fourth quarter earnings, but reported losses for the year due to a pension deal.

Pence To Tour Kennedy Space Center, Lead National Space Council Meeting In Florida Visit.

The Tampa Bay (FL) Times (2/19, Leary) reports that Vice President Pence will visit Florida on Tuesday and Wednesday to tour the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station launch facilities, participate in a commercial spaceflight federal reception, and head the second meeting of the National Space Council at NASA's Kennedy Space Center (KSC). The Wednesday meeting $\overline{>}$ 0 titled "Moon, Mars, and Worlds Beyond: Winning the Next Frontier" – "will include testimonials from leaders in the civil, commercial, and national security sectors about the importance of the United States' space enterprise," according to a White House release. Pence then will tour KSC before departing.

The Washington Examiner (2/19, Giaritelli) reports that the names of the companies participating in the meeting = 2have not been released and the vice president's office did not respond to a request for comment."

Industry Battles Over Hosting Reception For National Space Council. The Washington Post (2/16, Davenport) reported that after it became known that the Commercial Spaceflight Federation – of which SpaceX is a member – would host a reception for the second meeting of the National Space Council, Lockheed Martin and The Boeing Company "complained to the White House, which agreed that they, too, should host the reception." One industry official said that "we wanted to make sure the entirety of the industry was represented to the council and not just a subset. $\overline{\pi}$ 0 The event was intended to take place at the Kennedy Space Center (KSC) Visitor Complex, but as the event "grew in size," it is = 2now being hosted by the Aerospace Industries Association, the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics and the Coalition for Deep Space Exploration, as well as the Commercial Spaceflight Federation."

NASA Certifies SpaceX? 9s Falcon 9 Rockets For Science Missions.

SPACE (2/19, Foust) reports that NASA has certified the "current version of the SpaceX Falcon 9" to launch selected categories of science missions. NASA "disclosed the certification in its full fiscal year 2019 budget proposal, released Feb. 14, in a section about NASA's Launch Services Program (LSP)." The budget stated that SpaceX had successfully completed \overline{Z} 0Category 2" certification for the Falcon 9 "Full Thrust," which "supports the launch of the NASA Transiting Exoplanet Survey Satellite (TESS) mission in March 2018." NASA spokesperson Cheryl Warned confirmed Category 2 certification had been received for the rocket. Category 2 certification covers "medium risk" missions, and requires between one to three successful missions to qualify for the missions, "depending on the vehicle's heritage and level of NASA insight." The LSP is also conducting "preliminary activities" for certifying the Orbital ATK Antares launch vehicle, according to the documents. The program has also "started certification discussions regarding vehicles still in development, including Blue Origin's New Glenn, Orbital ATK's Next General Launch and United Launch Alliance's Vulcan."

Launch Of SpaceX Satellite Internet Payload Delayed To Wednesday.

The AP (2/17) reported that a SpaceX satellite launch from Vandenberg Air Force Base in California has been delayed "due to the need for more inspections." A Falcon 9 rocket was originally intended to launch a payload of two SpaceX test satellites on Sunday evening, but the launch is now targeted for Wednesday.

CNBC (2/17, Sheetz) reported that the SpaceX Starlink constellation, if fully deployed, would become the largest current satellite network. The largest "existing constellation is built by Iridium, with the company halfway through launching its new 75 Iridium Next satellites to space, set to finish deployment in the next year." The Starlink constellation is currently under consideration by the FCC.

The Washington Post (2/16, Fung) reported that the satellites are "part of a years-long plan by chief executive Elon Musk to create a fleet of orbiting devices to blanket the globe in wireless broadband connectivity." The satellites will use radio frequencies "known for their low-lag physical properties," in particular the Ka-, Ku- and V-bands, "with about 4,400 K-band satellites and more than 7,000 V-band satellites." The initial satellites in the network are expected to become operational next year.

Launch Of NASA'S TESS "Planet Hunter" Satellite Delayed.

Florida Today (2/17, Dean) reported that the launch of NASA's Transiting Exoplanet Survey Satellite (TESS) satellite, which had been scheduled for March 20, has been delayed to no earlier than April 16 after launch provider SpaceX requested more time "for hardware readiness and to meet NASA launch service mission requirements." The mission must launch no later than June. TESS is designed to "discover thousands" of exoplanets, and will "scan an area of sky 350 times larger than that covered by NASA's Kepler and K2 missions that have confirmed roughly 2,500 exoplanets" in a mission lasting at least two years.

Astronauts Complete Repairs To ISS Robotic Arm.

= A

The AP (2/16, Dunn) reported that astronauts aboard the International Space Station (ISS) "wrapped up months of repair work Friday" and completed repairs on the space station's Canadian-built robotic arm, which had "both of its aging mechanical hands replaced on spacewalks conducted in October and January." The final spacewalk was delayed due to complications with the robotic hand installed in January. Ground controllers eventually solved the issues, but additional delays were caused by the arrival of a Russian cargo vessel. NASA astronaut Mark Vande Hei and Japanese astronaut Nirishige Kanai "accomplished their main objectives so fast that they had time to tackle extra chores," and were able to end their spacewalk early.

US Air Force, Aerojet Rocketdyne Renegotiating AR1 Agreement.

Space News (2/16, Foust, Subscription Publication) reported that Aerojet Rocketdyne and the US Air Force are working to "revise an agreement to support development of the company's AR1 rocket engine, as questions continue about the engine's long-term future." In a February 14 statement, the Air Force Space and Missile Systems Center (SMC) "confirmed that Aerojet Rocketdyne is seeking to revise the Rocket Propulsion System (RPS) award the company received in 2016 to reduce the fraction of development costs the company has to pay." The award currently requires Aerojet Rocketdyne to assume a third of the costs related to the AR1 engine, and the company is seeking to reduce its share of the costs to one-sixth, according to the SMC. In its response, the SMC said that the \mathcal{F} 0Air Force has gained the necessary approvals to do so, if a mutually beneficial arrangement can be reached with Aerojet Rocketdyne," and added that the two sides "working very hard to find closure on a restructured agreement." The SMC said that any renegotiation would "still require the AR1 to be completed by the end of 2019."

JSC Director: One-Third Chance Next Astronaut On The Moon May Be A Woman.

The Guardian (UK) (2/17, Davis) reported that NASA Johnson Space Center (JSC) Director Ellen Ochoa said that there is at least a one in three chance that the first person to step foot on the moon this century will be a woman. Ochoa explained, "About a third of our active astronauts are women, so chances are at least a third."

KSC Visitor Center To Display Falcon Heavy Side Core Through Tuesday.

Florida Today (2/19, Kelly) reports that one of the side cores launched on SpaceX's first Falcon Heavy rocket will be on display at the space shuttle Atlantis exhibit at the Kennedy Space Center (KSC) Visitor Complex through Tuesday.

MANUFACTURING

Global Dividends Reached Record $1.25T In 2017.

Reuters (2/19, Masoni) reports that the investment firm Janus Henderson announced Monday that "global dividends rose 7.7 percent to an all-time high of $1.25 trillion (1 trillion euros) last year boosted by a buoyant world economy and rising corporate confidence." The firm said that the dividend increase – "the strongest since 2014 – was driven by increases in every region and almost every industry with record showings in 11 countries including the United States, Japan, Switzerland, Hong Kong, Taiwan and the Netherlands, the investment manager added." In 2018, Janus Henderson "expects dividends to keep the same 7.7 percent growth rate to reach around $1.35 trillion, as corporate and economic growth remains strong even in more volatile financial markets." Director of Global Equity Income Ben Lofthouse is quoted saying, "Companies are seeing rising profits and healthy cash flows, and that's enabling them to fund generous dividends. The record payout last year was almost three-quarters higher than in 2009, and there is more to come."

STEM EDUCATION

Reaching Out To Young People Helps To Build Interest In 歹 0Smart Manufacturing."

Advanced Manufacturing (2/15) reported that rather than continuing to "bemoan the problem" of a lack of skilled workers, "manufacturers are taking a multi-faceted approach to bridge the gap — not only for next year but also for 15 years down the road." One part of the solution is "reaching out to children as young as nine to build excitement and get the next generation interested in smart manufacturing." Rockwell Automation Global STEM Ambassador Jay Flores was quoted saying, "At a young age, students are curious. They're asking questions. They haven't yet said, 'I'm not a math person,' so we want to get them before they have those doubts or they lose that passion for learning and curiosity." In addition, "manufacturers also are offering scholarships and apprenticeships," while "companies are providing on-the-job training and education reimbursements to deepen and broaden their skills."

Separately, The Hill (2/15, Milliken) reported on a hearing in the House Science, Space and Technology Committee on Thursday that focused on "new programs to help boost the number of science and technology workers in the US." The Hill added that "the Science committee's subcommittee on research and technology heard from educators who highlighted vocational training programs, two-year degrees and community colleges to help fill the gap."

Manufacturing Institute's Lee: US Not Producing Enough Workers To Fill Coming Jobs. The Hill (2/13, Wilson) reported on the various efforts to combat the "skills gap" in the US workforce, writing that "economists, demographers and political leaders are increasingly concerned that the next generation of workers won't be ready to fill millions of new jobs across the country." It added that "the combination of a generational sea change in the workforce and a technological revolution in the economy is conspiring to create a skills gap that could leave jobs unfilled."

Subject: Employee Freedom on Trial Monday

Christina Mazzanti, Dir., Communications christina@edreform.com (202) 750-0016

Monday: US Supreme Court hears arguments on worker freedom

Janus v. AFSCME decision, whether favorable or not, will have wide-ranging implications for public-sector union employees and education at large

(Washington, D.C.) - On Monday the U.S. Supreme Court hears oral arguments in Janus v. AFSCME. The significance of this case cannot be overstated; the decision could potentially restore the freedom of public employees to choose how they want their hard-earned paychecks spent, and might put decisions about voluntary union membership back into the hands of the employees themselves.

According to the Manhattan Institute, the decision can affect 5 million public workers across 22 states including California, Illinois, and New York.

The case results will also have implications for the quality of education we deliver to our children. The teachers unions fight hard to protect mediocrity, even in failing schools, and support policies that keep ineffective teachers in the classroom, a taken-for-granted practice which in turn discourages more quality entrants to the profession.

Union demands for teachers to all behave and comply with fixed rules about how schools are run stifle innovation.

The largest teachers unions in the U.S., the National Education Association and the American Federation of Teachers, are also among the largest political donors of all time, together spending the second most in political donations nationally. Many of the policies and politicians they support, and programs they seek to have implemented prevent children from escaping failing schools and deny parents their due power to determine which education best meets the needs of their children.

Leaders on both sides of the argument will be at the Supreme Court Monday. CER and its leadership will be on site to arrange interviews, and CER Founder & CEO Jeanne Allen will be available for comment. For more, contact Christina Mazzanti at (202) 750-0016 or christina@edreform.com, and for information on location

Monday contact Patrick Korten at (202) 288-4307 or patrick.korten@kortenmedia.com.

Subject: Please pass HB160 out of committee

Bill Seitz,

I was born and raised in Kenton, Ohio and my family still lives there. I am in Washington D.C. currently furthering my education working on a graduate degree, hopeful that what I learn will not only be useful in my future career endeavors but that I will be able to utilize my experience in my home state.

As an out transgender person my rights for employment and housing are protected here in Washington D.C. and it is a shame that Ohioans are not afforded the same right as those in our nations capitol. HB160 solves that discrepancy and makes Ohio a viable choice as a place to live and advance careers for people like me.

I hope someday I can move back to my home community with the confidence that I will be afforded protections from discrimination based on my gender identity and expression. HB160 is a great start to building that confidence.

When given the opportunity, please vote YES on HB160, The Ohio Fairness Act, all Ohioans deserve the right to work and live in the great state we were raised in.

Sincerely,

Keygan D. Miller

Buckeye's Robert Alt Sat Down with IdeaStream's Ashton Marra to Discuss Janus v. AFSCME

The Buckeye Institute's president and CEO Robert Alt, talked to IdeaStream's Ashton Marra about Janus v. AFSCME and the impact it could have on protecting the First Amendment rights of Ohio's public employees.

In the interview, Alt said in regards to public employees being forced to pay agency fees, "You don't have a choice then on how it is that the unions use that money in terms of speech, what they advocate for. That's really the core of this case."

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE February 24, 2018

The Buckeye Institute's Robert Alt: Unions Should Rally Behind the First Amendment Rights of All Public Employees

=A

Columbus, OH -- Robert Alt, president and chief executive officer of The Buckeye Institute, issued the following statement regarding the Working People's Day of Action rally in Columbus, Ohio.

"Today we witnessed the First Amendment in action. Individuals who support unions joined together at a rally to freely express their opinions. But what if instead of rallying and voicing their own opinions, they were forced to pay for the speech of those who oppose unions or else they would be fired? That would be unfair, not to mention violate the First Amendment. Mark Janus and public employees in many states including Ohio face exactly that kind of predicament.

"On Monday, we will once again watch the robust protections of our constitutional system in action as Mr. Janus' case is heard before the Supreme Court of the United States. If Mr. Janus prevails, public employees will no longer be forced to pay for political speech with which they disagree, thus ending the violation of their First Amendment rights.

"While some claim Janus v. AFSCME is an attempt to weaken unions, The Buckeye Institute filed an amicus brief demonstrating that unions can still thrive without compulsory dues. What will change if Mr. Janus prevails is that our hard-working public servants, even those who disagree with the unions, will have their First Amendment rights protected and respected. And that is something all of us should rally behind."

THE BUCKEYE INSTITUTE

In a piece for National Review, Buckeye's Robert Alt looks at the funding of Janus v. AFSCME, saying, "What is surprising is the fact that Mark Janus is personally funding a cadre of high-priced lawyers with one goal: making sure that Mark loses his case."

NATIONAL REVIEW

The Money Behind Janus: It's Deja vu All Over Again

National Review By Robert Alt February 26, 2018

This morning, the Supreme Court will hear oral arguments in Janus v. American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees, Council 31. The case asks a similar question to one raised just two years ago in Friedrichs v. California Teachers Association - namely whether forcing a public employee to choose between subsidizing a union's political speech or being subject to termination for failure to do so violates the First Amendment.

Coming so soon after Friedrichs - a case in which the Court deadlocked 4-4 after the tragic and untimely death of Justice Scalia - Janus has a déjà vu quality to it. The sense that we have seen all of this before is nowhere more palpable than in the public arguments marshaled by some of the more liberal elements of the media against Mark Janus's case.

Bereft of sufficient legal arguments to justify the First Amendment violations perpetuated against public servants, left-wing publications have resorted to attacking the messenger. Mark Janus, a child-support specialist for the state of Illinois, is accused of being an agent of big corporations and billionaires. The proof? The public-interest law firms that represent Mr. Janus - namely Liberty Justice Center and the National Right to Work Legal Foundation - are accused of taking donations from charitable foundations that support free-market policy.

Just as in Friedrichs, it is perfectly unsurprising that foundations and individuals voluntarily would give to non-profit, public-interest law firms that provide free representation to their clients. Indeed, public-interest firms on both the left and the right regularly rely on charitable donations to carry out their work.

What is surprising is the fact that Mark Janus is personally funding a cadre of high-priced lawyers with one goal: making sure that Mark loses his case. Why would he pay for the lawyers arguing against him? Because he has no choice. Mark is required to pay agency fees to the union, which are used for chargeable expenses like litigation, or he can be fired. And, of course, he is required to pay for political collective bargaining speech, or he can be fired.

This is the real story of the money behind the Janus case-a story of forced contributions for political speech. But the story could have a happy ending. The Supreme Court will hear arguments today in a case that could vindicate the First Amendment rights of millions of Americans like Mark Janus. For Rebecca Friedrichs, for Mark Janus, and for all the workers who are being denied a voice and a choice, let's hope that the second time is the charm.

Robert Alt is the president and chief executive officer of The Buckeye Institute.

After Attending Oral Arguments in Janus v. AFSCME, Buckeye's Robert Alt Reacts

Columbus, OH -- Robert Alt, president and chief executive officer of The Buckeye Institute, issued the following statement after attending the oral arguments in Janus v. American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees, Council 31 at the Supreme Court of the United States.

"Today, Mark Janus, and all hard-working public employees, had their day in court. Mr. Janus's lawsuit has the potential to be one of the most important labor and free speech cases in the past 40 years.

"Justice Kennedy, who is traditionally a swing vote on the Supreme Court, asked very tough questions of the union lawyers, in which he expressed major concerns about the speech at issue being both compelled and political. Given how frequently Justice Kennedy is in the majority, his questions have to be a cause of concern for those seeking to continue the practice of forcing public servants to pay for union speech with which they may disagree.

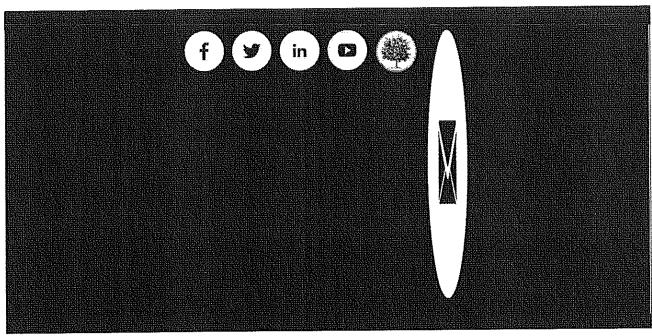

"What Mark, and others before him have done is not easy. Standing up for your rights and the rights of others is rarely an easy thing to do, but it must be done. It is immoral for the government to force hard-working public servants to pay for political speech with which they disagree under the threat of being fired. It is also unconstitutional."

The Buckeye Institute filed briefs with the Supreme Court of the United States supporting the free speech rights of public employees like Mr. Janus.

THE BUCKEYE INSTITUTE

Buckeye's Robert Alt, Rea Hederman, and Lisa Gates traveled to Washington, DC, for the oral arguments in Janus v. American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees, Council 31, and a rally in support of Mark Janus and hard-working public employees this morning.

Robert Alt (center) with Mark Janus and Rebecca Friedrichs outside the U.S. Supreme Court after oral arguments.

Before they left, Robert commented on the union rally in Columbus on Saturday, saying:

"While some claim Janus v. AFSCME is an attempt to weaken unions, The Buckeye Institute filed an amicus brief demonstrating that unions can still thrive without compulsory dues. What will change if Mr. Janus prevails is that our hard-working public servants, even those who disagree with the unions, will have their First Amendment rights protected and respected. And that is something all of us should rally behind."

Before getting in line at 5:45 a.m. to attend the oral arguments this morning, Robert wrote a piece for National Review commenting on the funding of Janus v. AFSCME, saying, "What is surprising is the fact that Mark Janus is personally funding a cadre of high-priced lawyers with one goal: making sure that Mark loses his case."

After the oral arguments, Robert again offered his expert opinion to the press and his reaction to today's hearing, saying:

"What Mark, and others before him have done is not easy, but it must be done. It is immoral for the government to force hard-working public servants to pay for political speech with which they disagree under the threat of being fired. It is also unconstitutional."

Robert Alt talks with media about the Janus v. AFSCME oral arguments and what the case means for public employees.

While Robert was in the courtroom today, Buckeye's Rea Hederman was on the steps of the Supreme Court speaking at the Stand With Mark rally outside the Supreme Court.

This Week: Gun Control and Remembering the Rev. Billy Graham

Congress returned yesterday from its Presidents' Day recess, which was dominated by the issue of gun control. Since the Feb. 14 shooting at Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Fla., the nation has been immersed in an intense debate on what to do to prevent future school shootings. However, don't expect Congress to act this week. While the Senate will be in session all week, the House will conclude business today to make way for the remembrance of Rev. Billy Graham, who will become only the fourth private citizen to lie in honor in the Capitol Rotunda on Wednesday and Thursday.

US Supreme Court Hears Arguments in Union Dues Case

Perhaps the most significant debate on Capitol Hill this week will took place yesterday in the U.S. Supreme Court. The decision could not only affect every member of a public sector union but also result in the largest shift in federal education policy in 40 years.

On Monday, the U.S. Supreme Court heard oral argument in Janus v. American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) Council 31. Mark Janus, a public-sector employee in Illinois, is challenging the constitutionality of a state statute allowing public sector employers and unions to agree that employees who don't join the union must still pay their "fair share" of collective bargaining costs. Janus argues that requiring him to pay his "fair share" of union dues is a violation of his First Amendment free speech rights. Janus asserts he should have the choice to join or not join, pay or don't pay.

Since 1977, when the US Supreme Court ruled in Abood v. Detroit Board of Education, public employees subject to fair share agreements have been required to pay for union representation, even if the worker doesn't join the union.

It is estimated that Janus v. AFSCME could impact 5.5 million public sector employees. The ruling could alter the relationship between labor and management, nationwide union membership and dues collection. At present, 22 states authorize fair share for public sector employees.

The Janus decision may have an outsized impact on public education given that two of the three largest public sector unions in the nation relate to education= 7the National Education Association and the American Federation of Teachers. Employees in education had the highest unionization rate of all sectors, with 37.2 percent being represented by a union.

On Dec. 5, attorneys general in 20 states (Michigan, Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, West Virginia, and Wisconsin) filed an amicus curiae brief in support of Janus. On Jan. 19, attorneys general in 20 states (New York, Alaska, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Iowa, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, Virginia and Washington) and the District of Columbia filed an amicus curiae brief in support of AFSCME.

In 2016, the U.S. Supreme Court considered a similar case Friedrichs v. California Teachers Union. With the death of Justice Antonin Scalia, the Court deadlocked with a 4-4 decision. Justice Gorsuch could be the swing vote to overturn Abood. A decision is expected by the end of June.

The attack, which killed six people and injured more than a thousand others, involved Islamic terrorists who blew up a 1,200 pound bomb in an underground parking garage in an attempt to collapse the twin towers.

White House Meeting on School Safety

In the wake of the Parkland, Fla., school shooting, last week President Donald Trump, Vice President Mike Pence, and Secretary of Education, Betsy DeVos met with more than 40 survivors, teachers and community members to discuss strategies to reduce school violence. In the meeting, the president expressed his support to improve federal background checks on gun purchases, equip school staff with firearms and explore other avenues to improve school safety. The president also issued a Presidential Memorandum directing the U.S. Department of Justice to "expeditiously as possible, to propose for notice and comment a rule banning all devices that turn legal weapons into machineguns." An official federal regulatory review of the "bump stock" rule began last fall, following the deadly shooting in Las Vegas, Nev. Over 100,000 comments were received and are being reviewed by the Justice Department.

Supreme Court to Hear Online Sales Tax Case in April

On Friday, the Supreme Court set the argument date for the South Dakota v. Wayfair remote sales tax case for Tuesday, April 17. If the court rules in the South Dakota's favor, every state could be granted the authority to require remote businesses to collect and remit sales taxes on transactions made by their state's residents. If South Dakota loses, the long-term viability of the sales tax as a state revenue stream for states may be in jeopardy. DACA and Immigration Debate Stalls in Senate

Before Congress recessed, and before the re-emergence of the gun control debate, a fierce debate on immigration consumed Capitol Hill. However, lawmakers on Capitol Hill failed to reach a consensus on the issues of immigration reform, border security and the "Dreamers" and there is still no clear path forward for a comprehensive deal. In the Senate, neither of the four immigration-related proposals cleared the 60 vote threshold needed to advance legislation and it is unlikely that any proposal from the House would be entertained by the Senate.

While the president had set March 5 as the deadline for Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) recipients, at which point he would terminate the program, federal district judges in California and New York have delayed that possibility, thus allowing more time for negotiators to work out a deal. On Monday morning, the U.S. Supreme Court denied the administration's request to rule on the legality of DACA in advance of a U.S. Circuit Court decision. In a one sentence denial of the administration's request, the Court stated, "[i]t is assumed that the Court of Appeals will proceed expeditiously to decide this case." The Court of Appeals is expected to rule on the injunction as early as April.

Congressional Appropriators Race to March 23 Deadline

The Bipartisan Budget Act of 2018 included the fifth continuing resolution (CR) for fiscal year (FY) 2018 and set new spending caps on how much the government can spend through FY 2019. Now, lawmakers have just four weeks to craft the 12 annual appropriations bills, or one combined omnibus bill, before March 23 when the government is at risk of another government shutdown. To make things even more complicated, the budget deal also had several informal agreements that were agreed to, but did not give specifics. This includes yearly funding of:

- $3 billion to "fight against the opioid and mental health crises."
- $10 billion for infrastructure.
- $2 billion to "rebuild and improve" veteran's health care.
- $2 billion for "college affordability."
- $2.9 billion for the child care development block grant.
- $1 billion for the National Institutes of Health.

Now, appropriators will have to translate how this funding will look while the party leaders act as chaperones to make sure everybody complies with the deal's stipulations. This also may be the last major legislative vehicle of the year, so you can bet lawmakers are rushing to get their priority bills added to the omnibus. The budget deal reached earlier this month also created a joint committee that is specifically tasked with "advancing reforms to the budget and appropriations process." Last week, House leaders made their selections on who would try to tackle this monstrous task. Speaker Paul Ryan chose Steve Womack (R-Ark.), Rob Woodall (R-Ga.), Jodey Arrington (R-Texas), and Pete Sessions (R-Texas), while Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi chose Nita Lowery (D-N.Y.), Lucille Roybal-Allard (D-Calif.), Derek Kilmer (D-Wash.) and John Yarmuth (D-Ky.). Senate leaders have yet to name their eight members to the reform committee.

DYK? On Feb. 25, 1863, 155 years ago, President Abraham Lincoln signed the National Currency Act (later called the "National Bank Act"), which was the first attempt to establish a central bank following the failures of the First and Second Banks of the United States. The law aim to address the hodge-podge of local banks, local money, and conflicting regulatory standards that existed before the Civil War. The act allowed for the creation of national banks, planned for a national currency, and gave the federal government the ability to sell war bonds and securities.

House Republicans Signal Willingness to Negotiate with Senate on Banking Reform Measures

House Financial Services Committee Chair, Jeb Hensarling (R-Texas), appears to be open to negotiations with the Senate on Dodd-Frank rollback measures. Hensarling, who has a steady track record of wanting to wholly dismantle Dodd-Frank, now seems to be open to more moderate reforms in a strategic attempt to get legislation to the president's desk.

Hensarling's original banking reform legislation, the Financial CHOICE Act of 2017, would have removed significant portions of Dodd-Frank. His new strategy consists of multiple individual bills amounting to an a la carte offering of banking reform measures. House Republicans are hoping that this strategy is more palatable to moderate senators than the sweeping Financial CHOICE Act, which many deemed D.O.A. in the Senate last year after it passed the House.

In his attempt to work with the Senate, Hensarling seems willing to ease up on tough reform proposals designed to slash the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau—an agency that has proven to be a political lightening rod since its Dodd-Frank inception in 2010. Bipartisan policies that seem to be on the table in both chambers include relaxing regulatory oversight of credit rating agencies and increasing capital holdings thresholds for small and mid-sized banks that currently require heightened scrutiny under Dodd-Frank.

These latest attempts to move bi-partisan banking reform legislation come at the chagrin of some Democrats who feel that such measures would amount to taking a step back after progress made in the post-Great Recession era. If the House and Senate can successfully negotiate the legislation, the president has signaled ardent support for legislation that rolls-back Dodd-Frank in any form.

DESCRIPTION

The Trump administration released its long-awaited infrastructure plan on February 12. The plan includes $200 billion in federal spending to incentivize $1.5 trillion in new infrastructure investment nationally. It would streamline environmental permitting, create incentives for state and local governments to raise more revenue, and support greater use of public-private partnerships and other mechanisms to facilitate private participation in infrastructure delivery.

Trump: New NAFTA Would Prevent Proposed Tariffs

Last Thursday, President Donald Trump announced that the United States would impose 25 percent tariffs on imported steel and 10 percent tariffs on imported aluminum. The move, which surprised many in Washington and even many of the president's advisers, rattled the stock market as well as many manufacturing companies that rely on the metals. The announcement also surprised officials in the European Union, who have threatened to retaliate by imposing penalties on $3.5 billion of U.S. exports, especially on products manufactured in states of Republicans leaders, including Harley-Davidson motorcycles (Wisconsin, Speaker Paul Ryan) and bourbon (Kentucky, Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell).

The U.S. has experimented with steel tariffs relatively recently. In 2002, President George W. Bush imposed sweeping tariffs on steel imports but dropped them in 2003. The tariffs raised the cost of steel by 3 percent and a 2003 study by the research firm Trade Partnership Worldwide estimated that the higher steel prices, caused chiefly by the tariffs, cost 200,000 steel-consuming jobs in 2003, largely in manufacturing.

This morning, the president tied the tariffs to the ongoing negotiations to rewrite the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) by tweeting that the "Tariffs on Steel and Aluminum will only come off if new & fair NAFTA agreement is signed." The comments are not particularly surprising as Canada and Mexico were the first and fourth top suppliers of U.S. imported steel in 2017. Given that it is an election year both in the U.S. and in Mexico, many NAFTA watchers believe that talks to renegotiate the three-country agreement may last the rest of the year. However, retaliation against the U.S. tariffs could come much more quickly.

Seventh round of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) Renegotiations Wrap up Today

Representatives from Mexico, Canada and the U.S. convened over the past week for the seventh round of NAFTA negotiations in Mexico City.

Later today, the seventh-round negotiations are scheduled to conclude with a meeting among the U.S. Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer, Canadian Foreign Minister Chrystia Freeland and Mexican Economy Minister Ildefonso Guajardo. The three top trade officials from the NAFTA countries are expected to hold a press conference after the formal round of negotiations are completed.

Last week, Trump announced plans to impose tariffs on steel (25 percent) and aluminum (10 percent) to protect natural security interests. However, Trump has not specified whether he will grant exemptions to the tariffs for key allies and vital trading partners. An eighth round of NAFTA negotiations in Washington, D.C., is expected to be held in early April.

This Week on Capitol Hill

The Senate is turning to banking reform as efforts to pass gun control legislation appear to have stalled. The financial legislation, which will provide relief to small financial institutions and community banks, would be the first rewrite of the Dodd-Frank reform bill, legislation enacted nearly eight years ago in wake of the financial crisis. The legislation is expected to consume most of the chamber's floor time this week.

During its brief sessions on Monday and Tuesday last week, the House passed a bill to make it easier for victims and prosecutors to sue websites linked to sex trafficking. This week, the House is expected to vote on two energy and environment bills: the Blocking Regulatory Interference from Closing Kilns (BRICK) Act and the Satisfying Energy Needs and Saving the Environment (SENSE) Act. The BRICK Act would change certain Environmental Protection Agency regulations to benefit the brick and structural clay ceramics manufacturing industries. The SENSE Act would exempt certain power plants, which burn coal refuse, from parts of a 2012 air pollution rule. The House is expected to vote on the bills on Wednesday and Thursday.

The House is also expected to vote on the Comprehensive Regulatory Review Act on Tuesday, which is aimed at eliminating outdated or unnecessary regulations. The bill would require the audit of financial regulations to be completed every seven years, instead of every 10, and would expand the number of federal financial agencies the review requirements apply to.

DYK? Until the adoption of the 20th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution in 1933, U.S. presidents where inaugurated on March 4. However, the first president, George Washington, was not inaugurated until April 30. Although Congress had scheduled the first inauguration for March 4, 1789, they were unable to count the electoral ballots as early as anticipated.

Roadblock to 2018 Infrastructure Bill?

Last week, Assistant Majority Leader, Senator John Cornyn (R-Texas) conveyed doubt that a large infrastructure package would pass Congress by the end of the year because of the large number of other priorities it must complete. While last month's budget deal calls for a $10 billion boost to infrastructure funding for both FY 2018 and FY 2019, it remains unclear how such funding will be allocated with broadband, surface transportation, and clean and safe drinking water among a bevy of potential options.

While the funding in the budget deal is needed given the state of the nation's infrastructure, it is far from Trump's proposed $1.5 trillion infrastructure plan. Senator Tom Carper (D-Del.), the ranking member of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, responded to Cornyn's remarks by saying, "I hope he's wrong. This administration, the president has talked so much about infrastructure, transportation, broadband deployment, water, sewer. If we can't figure out a path forward on this, shame on the president, shame on the administration, shame on the Congress."
